

Hello Boys!

Make Lots of Toys

THIS CHRISTMAS thousands of boys will have bushels of fun building big strong models with Mysto Erector. Don't you get left! Tell your parents that you want the Erector for Christmas.

Fun? I should say so! You just ought to see the fun other boys get building battleships, torpedo boats, aeroplanes, siege guns, skyscrapers, bridges, etc.

You can build so many models that if you worked every minute till next summer you probably wouldn't get them all finished. This is because you get so much building material with the Erector—more than with any other similar toy. There are more than 300 models possible to build—some of these 21 feet long, some 8 feet high. And they are exactly like real steel construction.

Big Manual tells how you can build all these models.

Electric Motor

With all sets over $3, I give, without extra charge, an electric motor. It's a lively one—runs the models such as elevators, drawbridges, traveling cranes, machine shops and many others. No other construction set gives a motor free.

Because the Erector girders have turned-over edges, you can build faster and easier. The models will not buckle up when building; they are stronger and won't wobble. Only a fourth as many bolts and screws are needed.

The Mysto ERECTOR

The Toy with Girders like Structural Steel

Just think of all the models you can build! Brooklyn Bridges with third-rail cars run by a real motor—skyscrapers with running elevators—electric-run sand shovels that dig just like the Panama Canal dredges—workshops with cute little band saws, power presses, lathes, buffing wheels, etc., that really go.

And think of all you'll find out about engineering and electricity.
